

Steamy Knights of the Five Fae Realms

The kingdom of Isbilliya is under threat. Princess Nerya's mother is dead and her sister captured by the Goblin Prince Lutin of Nain. She must band together with her friends and some trusty knights to defend their vision of equality for all-women and men, humans and fae.

Writing that makes your heart race

I LOVE fairy tale retellings and medieval fantasy romance. I love being swept away to a different time and place to see strong women exploring their identity and finding true love. These stories resonate with my childhood love of fairy tales and the Narnia Chronicles, and I combine them with my more recent interests in medieval literature and history and a grown-up interest in romance.

When I first began writing creatively as an adult I tried to write Tudor historical romance but found it too confining for my individual interests. What I love about fantasy romance is that I can rewrite some of the injustices of the past while bringing out the best parts of those times—making it a sublime readerly escape from the stress of our real world!

Princess Nerya's Knight

Princess Nerya must band together with her friends and a group of knights to protect their way of life. Sir Alonso doesn't believe in commitments. But when the princess needs his help he thinks he might be changing his mind. Can this group defeat their foes while Nerya and Alonso fight their growing attraction?

Duchess Marjita's Knight

Duchess Margareta is the richest woman in the kingdom yet she still has to abide by her father's wishes and marry for politics. Sir Javier has been disinherited because he is helping the vulnerable instead of exploiting them. When Margareta discovers Javier's secret she must choose either to help him or turn him in. But could she live with herself if she doesn't pursue their connection?

Lady Camila's Knight

The Royal Consort's brother has been kidnapped and taken to Jabal Tariq Island. Lady Camila must overcome her resentment and jealousy and work with her rival and star warrior X. Together they must travel to Jabal Tariq, infiltrate the Countess's reverse harem, and retrieve their royal mission target.
